Why....just....why?

I was looking through fanfiction.net, and in the Bleach and Naruto sections, I couldn't help but run afoul of some fics that had Sasuke or Ichigo freakin' pregnant.

Putting aside the whole 'genetically unable to carry a child' issue, what is it with these disgusting yaoi fan-girls and their need to make guys pregnant?

Speaking as a yaoi fangirl...I don't get it either. I mean too much OOCness bothers me enough as it is, but a generally tough-guy male character as a mother? Just...no.

That, and the fact that I despise babies.

(Intersting fact: I've witnessed two different shows on KidsWB where a male pregnancy is referenced to...Ozzy thinks he's pregnant in Ozzy and Drix and Agent J actually does get pregnant with an alien in Men in Black)

I....don't know. I'm an admitted yaoi fangirl, but...leave pregnancy to the girls. Purely speculating here, maybe it stems from a desire to see what children of the guys would look like if they're both attractive. I mean, I'd love to see Mako and Neph's auburn-haired brats, I think they'd grow up to be amazingly hot. Same principle, cept with guys? blinks

Another thought occured to me: Maybe some fangirls don't really think its cute as much as they're just writing it to parody yaoi or the fandom. You know, like how few people take tentacle rape seriously anymore? Maybe for some, mpreg is the same.

I made a similar topic at the yaoi LJ community.

On a semi-unrelated note, I once ran across this one website where all of the Senshi's images were edited to make them look pregnant. Yes, including Sailor Chibichibi. And no, she wasn't edited to look older.

snork There used to be Zoisite mpreg out there before the author left the internets in a flurry of drama. Oh, what a bundle of fun that one was! (Though to be fair, she claimed that the child was created out of the pure love of Kunzite and Zoisite. But she also liked to be indecisive about whether she was writing about the male Zoisite or the female Zoycite, so I don't think even she really knew how babies are made.)

I take offence to the "disgusting yaoi fangirl" thing, since that's like saying all het lovers are into tentacles. I do know that in that particular freaky case, the author really was serious about it because she desperately wanted a Kunzite/Zoisite spawn, who conveniently looked exactly like a very small Zoisite and also had magical senshi powers AND the ginzuishou because there was some sort of relation to Queen Serenity herself because I think Zoisite was actually Princess Serenity's long-lost sister. Yeah, a LOT went into the making of this child, apparently. Anyway, I've never personally read any other mpreg, but I recall having Gundam mpreg described to me, and that WAS a parody, as far as I could tell.

Huh, I don't think I've even seen doujinshi with mpreg in them. And those things can be crazy, I mean, we're talking about body parts that talk back. I think this must be a phenomenon restricted to the psychotic few.

oh yeah, the one with the back-talking body parts cracks me up so much! I nearly fell out of my chair laughing.

anyway, back on topic....runs away

You know it! That one is made out of some serious crack. I'd like to meet the ladies who thought that one up.

Don't; it wasn't ment in the sense that all yaoi fangirls are disgusting, but in the sense of 'disgusting' yaoi fangirls being the perpetrators.

If I thought yaoi fangirls were disgusting based on the fact that they were yaoi fangirls, I'd be one lonely Shitennou fan.

Speaking as a fangirl but not of the yaoi persuasion (or perhaps I'm still in the closet), I quite enjoy Mpreg stories (well, actually, so far I've only read that huge story by ninja-kitty where Sasuke's pregnant). For one thing it was well-written and didn't make me want to claw my eyes out. The characterisations weren't too OOC. But I guess the reason I'm not averse to it is that these are tough guys. So how do tough guys cope in a decidedly feminine role? I like the mind-crack. But obviously it's one of those plots that if you aren't a skilled writer, nothing short of ritual suicide is going to save it. That's just my two cents. Oh and I agree on the pretty babies thing that Wils mentioned.

My only case of writing a sort-of-MPreg was precisely triggered by "Ooooooh, these characters are so handsome, they should breed so we could get a lot more handsome running around!".

Though there was no pregnancy of sort, because if I want to deal with girly inconvenients, I will write hetero fic

Besides, it was convenient because it was about Zoisite and Kunzite, and that in my own background for them (that I made up when I only knew the anime canon), they have way enough magic powers to NOT need to go through pregnancy. So I didn't feel it was too OOC, at least not too unrealistic to find a way for them to mix their genetic material.

I did have some problems to make Zoi and Kunzite actually want a love child, especially as, uh, I don't have much of a motherly instinct myself.

Except for fictional kids of my favorite characters.

It's a fun game, especially when they have odd hair / eye / skin colors
